Flower Seed

AUG 6 1937

U. S. Department of Agriculture

Like those planted in the famous old Gardens of Williamsburg, Virginia.

(These are seed put up for White's by one of the most reliable seed firms in the South—in business since 1878)

All 15 Varieties Listed Below—Postpaid, $2.00

Asters, Wilt-Resistant. A superb mixture of many varieties and many colors of each variety.

Antirrhinum or Snapdragon. A University of California development that produces 80% or more rust-proof plants.

Calendula, Orange Shaggy. A distinct type with deeply fringed petals.

Coleus, Radiant Mixture. A brilliant mixture of all imaginable markings.

Delphinium Bellamosa. Intense rich deep blue.

Escholtzia, Sunset. Rich deep golden orange, an unusual color in Escholtzias.

Larkspur, Giant Imperial. A fine mixture of many colors, including the latest introductions.

Marigold, Crown of Gold. The gold medal winner in the All-America Selection. The crown is made up of curled and interlaced petals surrounded by a collar of broad recurved petals.

Nasturtium, Dwarf Double Sweet-Scented Gem. The colors are evenly balanced, including yellow, orange, crimson, cerise, cream, maroon and the spotted varieties.

Petunia, Balcony. Dwarf plants that produce a wealth of bloom all summer. Blooms 3 inches across.

Petunia, Flaming Velvet. The nearest approach to a red petunia so far developed. 15 to 18 inches high. Gold medal winner in All-America Selection.

Salvia or Scarlet Sage, Fireball or Bonfire. Produces many flower spikes, each bearing 20 to 30 intense scarlet blooms.

Verbena, Beauty of Oxford Hybrids. The individual florets will easily cover a silver half-dollar. The color shades from rose pink to rose red.

Zinnia, Fantasy. Distinctly different from all other zinnias, the blooms being a mass of shaggy ray-like petals. The mixture contains many colors.

Zinnia, Linearis. A grand type for flower beds. 8 to 10 inches high, spreading nearly 2 feet if thinned out. It bears hundreds of blooms at a time.
